Following a thorough search and rigorous selection process, the Board of Airport Coordination Limited is pleased to announce the appointment of Neil Garwood as our new Chief Executive Officer (CEO). Neil was formerly Managing Director of Southampton Airport, where he had been for ten years, having risen through the ranks after initially joining them as Terminal Operations Manager in 2010.

Neil will succeed Airport Coordination Limited's departing CEO, Edmond Rose, who is moving on from his role at the end of February. The ACL Board thank Edmond for his outstanding contributions and leadership throughout his time with us and especially through the challenges of this last year.

The Chair of ACL, Lesley Cowley said "I am delighted to welcome Neil to ACL. Whilst our current CEO will be much missed, we are confident that Neil's experience, drive and values make him an ideal successor to lead ACL as we emerge from the pandemic".

The new CEO, Neil Garwood said "I am excited to be joining the world's leading independent airport coordination organisation at a time of seismic change in the industry and very much look forward to continuing to deliver on ACL's ambition of world class coordination excellence for our customers and stakeholders".
