Geven has unveiled its latest Economy Class seat designed for narrowbody, high-density cabins.

The SuperEco weighs 7.9 kg per pax and offers ‘an unparalleled shin and knee clearance’, with armrests which can be folded up and laid flush with the backrest.

Pitched at 28 inches, the seat offers generous legroom thanks to the redesigned supporting structure. SuperEco also offers a range of optional features in order to fit the needs of different airlines. Among a variety of connectivity options and Power /USB integration, customisation options for dress covers, armrests and endbays are available.

“We are proud of our teamwork,” said Alberto Veneruso, Managing Director at Geven. “SuperEco’s impressive shin and knee clearance paired with its low weight and excellent reliability, sets an unparalleled benchmark in the aircraft seating industry. With SuperEco, airlines will be able to offer maximum comfort and living space to passengers while contributing to green-sustainability efforts via reduced fuel consumption,” added Veneruso.

An announcement regarding the next generation models for economy, premium economy and business categories designed in partnership with PriestmanGoode will be made soon.
