Chorus Aviation Inc. ('Chorus') announced that its subsidiary, Voyageur Aviation Corp. ('Voyageur'), has added ATR 42 and 72 aircraft types to its product offering, further diversifying Chorus' business and cross-company support capabilities.

"The growth momentum for Voyageur Avparts continues," said Gary Gilbert, Vice President Avparts, Voyageur. "Expanding our parts sales and provisioning with ATR components was a logical next move for Voyageur, especially given Chorus' recent acquisition of Falko Regional Aircraft - further bolstering Chorus' position as a premier full-service provider in regional aviation. We are fortunate to capitalize on our companies' synergies to further support regional aircraft customers at every stage of an aircraft's lifecycle."

Voyageur's Avparts division specializes in Used Serviceable Material ('USM') support for regional aircraft types, including Bombardier/Mitsubishi CRJ, De Havilland Dash 8, and ATR. Core services include parts sale and provisioning, component repair and overhaul management, inventory leasing and consignment programs, and aircraft end-of-life and disassembly.
